Director's Notes

Little Women is a gift.

What better play selection for this remarkable group of young actors than a story that offers them a parallel journey to their own? One that follows each character's discovery of their own individual voice, and how the strength of these voices builds a family and a community.

As the inaugural class of what is currently the only four year degree program for musical theatre in Canada, they have each taken another step during this rehearsal process toward finding, owning, and now sharing their voice.

Finding our voice is often a Herculean task, and it is one that this company of actors has undertaken and executed with courage, conviction, passion, vulnerability, trust, craft, and a sense of wonder at the power of theatre and collaboration.

We are so privileged to share the gift of this story, and this beautiful group of voices in harmony with you, the audience.

With love,
Thomas
