Raised in 1916, the No. 2 Construction Battalion was the first large predominately black military unit in Canadian military history and served in France from 1917 until the end of the war. This was a major step towards reducing racial barriers for black Canadians.