DIRECTOR'S NOTES

Your wedding day. If it has already happened and you are lucky enough to have some fond memories of it, congratulations. If it is not on your list of desires at all then congratulations to you too. But if you are someone who has thought about it and has started planning it before you have met Partner Right then do beware. Weddings can sit in the subconscious like a blimp waiting for take off. It will be better, more elegant and more entertaining than any of the others you have been to. In fact, other people's weddings are really just research for your own big moment. And the silver lining that cuts like a knife in many weddings is the thought and design of the spectacular bridal party. If you have ever experienced the honour of being a bridesmaid or an usher you may know how it can be both fun and horrific. Especially when the bride is the perfect in every way Tracy Marlowe, beautiful controlling daughter of a wealthy Doctor and his lovely taut and medicated wife. Tracy's wedding will be the highlight of this season and you're invited. But if you notice that the bridesmaids are missing from the reception look high up into the windows of the mansion and see if you can catch a glimpse of a real wedding party. Enjoy.
